COUNTY AGENT HERE

GOING OUT OF BUSINESS

BUICK AGENTS HAVE

A DEMONSTRATION DAY

H. R. Leonard, county agent for Washington county, has been spending the past few days in this vicinity. Mr. Leonard came here for the purpose of buying a couple of carloads of Holsteins for his county, and when interviewed on Tuesday said that he had found some nice cattle in this county, but the farmer did not seem particularly anxious to sell, in one place in the northern part of the county, one farmer was offered $1700 for 17 head, but at that time had not made up his mind whether he had wanted to part with the animals or not. Mr. Leonard was accompanied by Ernest Johnson, who is engaged in farming over near Stillwater.

About fifteen Buick automobiles came here on Friday of last week to witness a trial demonstration of the number of miles a 1916 Buick will run on a gallon of gasoline oil.

Owing to the high price at which everything is selling it is impossible to do business and make any money, and he has decided to close out his stock and turn his attention to painting in the future. Mr. Jung is offering his stock at exceptionally low prices.

County Superintendent

The village of Plover went dry at the last election, which means that the macadam road between there and Stevens Point will probably be used even more in the future than it has been in the past. It seems like a kind of a foolish proposition for one locality to vote out the saloons when some place only a few miles distant has them running full blast. The young people would do better if kept at home to do their drinking, rather than to be driven to some neighboring town where they are away from the influence of their elders.

GOING OUT OF BUSINESS

Owing to the high price of everything that has to be bought in my line, I have decided that for some time to come there will be little to be made in the paint and paper line, and with this idea in view I am going to close out the business at whatever I can get for it. If you are looking for bargains in paint and wallpaper, you will do well to look over my stock, and compare the prices with what others are charging, and you will probably find some items that will interest you. Here are a few of them:

40c Wall Paper at 25c

35c Wall Paper at 20c

30c Wall paper at 15c

20c Wall Paper at 10c

$3.00 Varnish at $2.30

$2.50 Varnish at $1.75

Ripon College has completed its big financial campaign. Wisconsin and the city of Ripon are to be congratulated on this great victory for the college.

The following are among the contributors: General Education at a Board, $50,000; Mr. O. H. Ingram of Eau Claire, one of the Trustees of the College, $50,000; Miss Shirley Far of Chicago, also one of the Trustees, $20,000; Andrew Carnegie of New York, $35,000; citizens of Ripon, $55,500; and several hundred donors, mostly old students, alumni, and friends of the college, contributed sums ranging from $1 to $10,000.

Ripon College is now a million dollar concern, comprising a plant without incumbrance valued at $500,000 and $100,000 productive endowment. Ripon College is on the Carnegie foundation. It has also received the endorsement of the Rockefeller Board.

Ripon is a small college and is proud of it. It hopes to remain this type of college, having proved the value of its type in the output of its students in leadership in all professions and avocations of life. The credits of Ripon College are accepted on equal basis by any college or university in the country.

While the campaign was being conducted, the college has had one of its most prosperous years. It holds the cup for scholarship in the Classics. Mr. Latimer Johns, a graduate of Ripon College is appointed on the Rhodes scholarship at Oxford; this honor is granted on the basis of scholarship and leadership after extensive examinations and carries with it an appropriation of fifteen hundred dollars a year for three years. First place was awarded the Pease Oratorical Contest. A state champion ship in football, also a state champion ship in basketball comes this year in connection with the reconstruction of our ideas for physical education, which enables every student on the campus to secure its benefits. The present college year finds the enrollment one-third larger than ever before in the history of the college.

Ripon exists to serve the public.

It believes in the personal element in education. It believes its ideals can be better accomplished by keeping of a moderate size. Its motto is "Quality First"; its ideals are democracy, scholarship, and the creative power of moral and religious life.

WOOD COUNTY CAN BOAST OF LARGEST ROUND BARN IN THE WORLD

MANGLED REMAINS FOUND ON TRACK

The mangled remains of a man were found on the St. Paul tracks at an early hour Sunday morning about three miles north of this city by an engine crew that were on their way north. The find was reported at Marion City, and the authorities here were notified of the fact and District Attorney Roberts and Under-sheriff Carlin went to the scene of the accident and had the remains brought to this city.

It was found upon investigation that the body was that of Fred Mantle, of Wausau, a telegraph having been found in his pocket addressed to his employer, and signed, Mrs. Fred Mantle. The authorities at Wausau were communicated with and it was found that Fred Mantle had been at Minneapolis looking for work, and was supposed to be on his way home, and there was little doubt that the body found on the track was his. Later Mrs. Mantle and Mr. Mantle came to this city and identified the remains as those of Mr. Mantle. The body was mangled in a horrible manner, the head being severed from the trunk, both arms being cut off and one leg crushed. The remains were brought to this city where they were taken to the Ragan Undertaking rooms where they were prepared for burial and later shipped to Wausau.

It is supposed that the man was beating his way from Minneapolis to Wausau. That he was riding on a flat car and found the weather rather cold and that he tried to get into a box car, and while doing this fell from the train and was crushed beneath the wheels. He was a man 23 years of age, was married, but had not been doing very well at Wausau, and had been at Minneapolis looking for work.

THE "MILWAUKEE" ERECTS A NEW MILESTONE IN TRANSPORTATION ACHIEVEMENT

—When early in January of this year the first electrically driven "Olympian" mounted with ease the vast ramparts of the mighty Rockies, was turned into the history of transportation, and a new chapter—The Electrical Era in Railroading—began.

Splendid have been the last chapters in western up-building where the pathfinders Lewis and Clark the prairie schooner, the pony express, the first wood-burning locomotives, and later the great Mallet locomotives, have each marked the march of transportation development. But the world is ever moving onward to greater economies, greater efficiencies, greater delights, and the electrical era will challenge the past in splendid achievement, calling on the mountain streams for their tremendous, perpetual power, mastering the mountain barriers, and the prairies, hauling heavier loads with greater dash and dash, leaving the billowing smoke, soot and cinders. Electric service stands as a momentous milestone in transportation achievement.

On your next trip northwest, take the "Milwaukee" Equipment, reded, scenery and service all combine to make this the premier transcontinental route to Spokane, Seattle and Tacoma.

PERTAINING TO BIRDS

The Abel & Podawil company have display of bird houses and bird books in their show windows which was placed there by the library with the idea of interesting the young people in the matter of protecting, and to a certain extent, caring for the birds. The bird houses displayed in the windows are offered for sale and range in price from the nominal sum of 25 cents and up.

However, almost any boy of ordinary intelligence can construct a bird house of some kind, while it may not be a work of art, it will be just as good for the purpose for which it was intended, as the birds do not seem to care whether the place has any artistic merit or not.

If the person who is doing the work happens to have a little skill and has access to some different colors of paint, it is possible for him to fix up something that will be an ornament to the yard in which it is erected.

DEATH OF FRANK BOYANOWSKI

Frank Boyanowski, a former resident of Grand Rapids, died very suddenly from heart trouble at his home at Stevens Point at an early hour Tuesday morning. He had been to bed feeling about as usual and it was not known that he was sick until his wife awoke up early in the morning and discovered that he was not breathing, and when she tried to arouse him found that he was dead.

Mr. Boyanowski came to this city Mr. Boyanowski came to this city organized and took some stock in that concern and was one of the officers in the institution for some time, but later moved to Stevens Point, where he was instrumental in organizing the National Brewing Company. He was fifty years old at his last birthday and is survived by his wife and eight children.

Average by SAMUEL HOPKINS ADAMS

OPEN TRAIL

WANTED—INSTRUCTOR IN SPANISH. One with recent experience preferred. Apply before 3 and 10 a.m. Doctor Hoff, 399 Fairfield Avenue.

Mr. A. V. R. E. Jones—Average Jones, his friends called him—was tired of spending his dead uncle's millions in New York and doing nothing more and craved to take part in the dynamic activities of life. At the suggestion of Waldemar, owner of an important and decent newspaper, he opened offices in Astor court and went in for following up queer advertisements and tracing down fraudulent advertisers. Business boomed.

"Not good enough," said Average Jones.

"The ad. says different, sir." Simpson raised the paper and read:

FIVE THOUSAND DOLLARS—THE aforesaid sum will be paid without question to anyone furnishing information which leads to the discovery of Roderick Hoff, twenty-four years old, who left his home in Toledo, O., on April 12, communicating with Dr. Conrad Hoff, Toledo.

"Surely Doctor Hoff is good for the amount."

"Oh he's good for millions. The point is, from what I can discover, Mr. Roderick Hoff isn't worth retrieving at any price above one dime."

"Was the information about him that you wished in the telegram?" asked the confidential clerk.

"Yes; all I wanted. Have the Toledo report forwarded his bill."

Left to himself, Average Jones again ran over the information to the lost Toledo youth. At twenty-four, it appeared, Roderick Hoff had achieved a career. Emerging from college, he had taken a post-graduate course in the cigarette ward of a polite retreat for nervous wrecks, endured two broach-to-broach suits, broken the record for speed violation arrests, had been bounced and short-circuited out of racing sums, and now was the horror of the pulpit and the delight of the city press. Bets were even in the Toledo clubs as to whether delirium tremens or paresis would win the event around young Mr. Hoff's kite-shaped race track of a brain.

With his tastes the income of twenty-five thousand dollars per annum which his father allowed him proved sadly insufficient to his needs. He mentioned this fact to his father early in April, only to be refused with some acerbity.

"Oh, very well," said he, "I'll go and make it myself."

To all intents and appearances, Roderick Hoff had dropped off the earth on or about April twelfth. By Aprilteenth the elder Hoff's five-thousand-dollar anxiety became known through the advertisement.

Simpson's face appeared at the door. His blond forehead was wrinkled with excitement.

"Doctor Hoff is here, Mr. Jones. I told him you—"

Following the word, there burst into Average Jones' private sanctum a gross old man, silk-hatted and bearded, whose side-whiskers bristled whitely with perturbed self-importance. In his hand was a patchy bunch.

"They tried to stop me," he spattered. "We! I'm worth ten million dollars, and a ten-dollar-a-week office trial tries to hold me up when I come here myself personally, from Toledo to see you."

The Ad. Advisor said curiously: "I can't take your case. Good-day."

"Not take it? Did you read the reward?"

"Yes. Get someone else to find your hopeful."

"It ain't no case of finding now. The boy's dead." His strident voice quavered and broke, but rose again to a smart. "And, by God, I'll spend a million to get the dogs that murdered him."

At the word "murdered" Average Jones' clean-cut, agreeable, but rather stoutly neutral face became resolute, forceful and quietly alert. The honest drawl signified awakened interest.

"How—do—you—know—he's dead?"

The other tore open the bundle he carried, and spread before Average Jones a white silk shirt stained with ominous brown splotches.

"It's his shirt. There's the initials. Mailed to my house with the note that came pinned to it. Here it is."

He produced a bit of coarse wrapping paper upon which was this message in rough capital letters:

TWO DAGOSH SHOT HIM DASSENT SAY NO MORE

Average Jones examined the wrapper. It was postmarked Cincinnati. He next smoothed out the creased silk and studied minutely the blotches. Applying a compass to one of the spots, he rubbed the wetted portion vigorously on a sheet of paper which lay near at hand. He scratched his chin with a slow movement.

"I don't see anything so far," he observed, "to indicate that your son is not alive and well at this moment. Dried blood rubs off a faint blue color." He picked up the sheet of paper from his desk. A deep brown streak showed where he had applied the moistened cloth. "It's the rawest kind of a blind. Why, the idiot who sent the shirt didn't even have the sense to fake bullet holes. Enough to make one lose all interest in the case," he added disgustedly.

Doctor Hoff began tugging at his side-whiskers. "Don't do nothing like that," he pleaded. "Come with me to Cincinnati. If he ain't dead they've kidnapped him for a ransom."

"Then Cincinnati is the last place on the map to look. Was he particularly drunk the day before he disappeared?"

"No. He was sober. And he was studyin', Spanish."

"Spanish, eh? How did you know about his studying?"

HAD FIGUREHEADS OF BEAUTY

In the Days of Sails, Ships Carried Some Really Remarkable Specimens of Carving.

An almost forgotten profession is that of ship carving. For many centuries, down to the beginning of the nineteenth, the ornamentation of vessels, especially man-of-war, was profuse, intricate and florid. The carving on the United States line-of-battle ship America, launched in 1782 and presented to France, will give some idea of the extent to which this was carried.

The figurehead was a female figure crowned with laurel, representing America. The right arm was raised, pointing upward. On the left arm was a buckler with a blue ground carrying 13 stars. On the stern of the ship under the cabin windows appeared two large figures in bas-relief representing "Tyranny" and "Oppression," bound and bleeding on the ground. On the back of the starboard quarter was a large figure of "Mars." On the highest part of the stern appeared "Wisdom," and above her an owl.

Philadelphia furnished not only the greatest ship designer in the United States, but also the best ship carver in the world, William Rush. In his workshop, he was without a rival, and to a wonderful technical skill he added an artistic sense of beauty and genius for composition.

Rush was the first carver to give an idea of life and motion to a ship's figurehead. Each of his figureheads was either the lifelike representation of a person or some symbolic conception expressed in exquisite carving. His most noted productions were "Nature" for the Constellation, "The Genius of the United States" for the frigate of that name and "The River God" for the East India ship Ganges. These figureheads were "milk feet" high and could be removed, for repair or in action.

The world's sugar production is estimated to be 100 million tons.

Each ton of sugar is equivalent to 1000 lbs. of sugar.

There are 1000 lbs. of sugar in a ton of sugar. The world's sugar production is estimated to be 100 million tons.

KILLED TENTMATE TWELVE YEARS AGO

Ojeda Says He Has Had No Luck Since He Shot Miller Near Manila.

San Francisco—Confessing that he had killed his tentmate near Manila over twelve years ago, and that he wished now to surrender and atone for his crime, W. A. Ojeda, an ex-soldier, gave himself up to the police.

Ojeda says the man he killed was George D. Miller, who enlisted in the army from Omaha under the name of George Moore, and that the crime occurred in the camp about four miles out of Manila during the night of June 27, 1903.

"We enlisted together, and were sent to the islands with the Eighteenth battery, field artillery," Ojeda said.

"I'll give you a small supply at the low rate of ten thousand dollars. I may add that—er—certified checks will be accepted."

For two hours the colonel with the occasional obliging assistance of his partner, talked bogged, argued, threatened, and even wept. By the end of that time his tongue was making sounds like a muffled castanet, and his resolution was scorched out of him.

"You've got us," he croaked. "Here's your checks. Give me the water."

"In proper and legal form, please," said Average Jones.

He produced a contract and a fountain pen. The contract was duly signed and witnessed. It provided for the transfer of the water, in consideration of one revolver and ten thousand dollars in checks. These checks were indorsed to A. V. R. E. Jones, whereupon he turned over the pal of water and the largest canteen to the parched miners. Then, sorting out the checks, he pocketed two aggregating five thousand dollars, tore up three, and holding the other in his hand, turned to Captain Funcke.

"Will five hundred dollars pay you for keeping young Hoff down a couple of months and making the beginning of a man of him?" he asked.

"Yes, and more," replied the captain.

"It's a go," said Average Jones. "I'd like to make the job complete."

Then, courteously bidding the North Pinto Gold Mining company farewell, the two water-dealers clambered up the rocks and disappeared beyond the abrupt skyline.

Once again Dr. Conrad Hoff sat in the private office of Average Jones, Ad-Visor. The young man was thinner, browner and harder of fiber than the Jones of two weeks previous. Doctor Hoff looked him over with shrewd eyes.

"Is that so?" The doctor's voice had taken on a sneering intonation. "You come back here with your job half done, with the guilty fellow loose an' runnin', an' you expect me to pay over the five thousand dollars to you. Huh."

"No, I—er—don't expect—er—anything of the sort," said Average Jones slowly.

Doctor Hoff's little, restless eyes puckered at the corners. He was puzzled. What did the young fellow mean?

"Don't ch," he said, groping in his mind for a solution.

"No. You forgot to send me that promised form of agreement, didn't you? Thought you'd fool me, perhaps. I took precautions."

"You got it?"

"In the bank."

"Where'dje get it?"

"From you, through your son's check, duly certified," replied Average Jones, with an amiable smile, as he opened the door significantly.

Using Butter.

Butter is the most easily digested of all the animal fats, partly because of the peculiar acids which it contains. In many cases of anemia and nervous exhaustion an increased amount of butter in the diet will have very beneficial results, and yet butter is the stumbling block in the way of economy in many households.

To average persons dropped down from a high plateau to a narrow arroyo. There the pursuers found the camp. It was deserted.

Like a hound on the trail, Captain Funcke cast about him.

"Here's where they came in. No—this is it. Confound the cross-tracks!" Straight for the rocky mesa. "That's it." They made their sneak while Hoff was asleep and were half out of the tentaqua when he was wakened.

"It's a case of travel light." The hunter, having over a small bag of food and a large canteen full of water, had packed a much larger load, including two canteens and a powerful field-glass. Taking a shotgun from the boat, he shouldered it and set out at a long, easy stride.

To Average Jones the memory of that day has never been wholly clear. Sodden with weariness, dizzied and muddled by the savage sun-glares, he followed, with eyes fixed, the rhythmic, aimlessly moving feet of his leader through an interminable desert of soft, clogging sand. At midnight the wearied pursuers dropped down from a high plateau to a narrow arroyo. There the pursuers found the camp. It was deserted.

Like a hound on the trail, Captain Funcke cast about him.

"This company" he said, "is now open for business."

At eight o'clock there was a clatter of hoofs upon the rocks and two men came staggering up the desolate road to the Tentuqua. They took a quick look about the camp and picked up an empty canteen. "Of course they won't leave him any water."

He turned and renewed his quick progress, leaping from boulder to boulder, between narrowing walls of gray-white rock. Just as Average Jones was spent and almost ready to collapse the leader checked.

"Hark!" he whispered.

Above the heating of the blood in his shirt came the sound of hoofs upon the rocks. "That's it." They made their sneak while Hoff was asleep and struck out for the inside desert route to the Tentuqua. He took a quick look about the camp and picked up an empty canteen. "Of course they won't leave him any water."

At the council meeting Wednesday evening the matter of a tie vote between Ostriske and Lemense was taken up and both of the parties agreed to the flip of a coin to decide the matter. When Ostriske was asked which he would take he called heads. Then Lemense was asked which he would take. Mike thought it over for a minute and then said he could not see that there was anything left for him to take except tails, so he wised those tails. When the coin was flipped it landed tails up, and M. Lemense was declared the choice of the people.

BARGAIN DAY A HUMMER.

It is not known just why so many people came in yesterday to look the town over and evidently buy some little thing or other from one of our stores, but it is thought that it was because it was one of the nicest days we have had this spring and then it might have been because of the bargains that the merchants were offering to their customers. Anyway, whatever it was, there was a large crowd in, and it looked good to everybody to see them.

600,000,000 CANS OF BEEF STEW ORDERED BY CANADIAN GOVERNMENT—PRICE OF PEAS WILL RISE

The latest issue of "The Canner," published in Chicago, stated that the Canadian government had given an order to the Imperial Canneries Limited, of Montreal, for 600,000,000 No. 1 cans of beef stew. The stew consists of beef, rice, beans, carrots, onions and rutabagas and it is calculated to constitute a complete ration for the soldiers at the front.

This huge order will be placed largely among the factories of the United States and the East Coast states that the Lange Canning Company has landed a portion of the immense order. It is authority for the statement that the new Claire concern will undergo a partial remodeling and re-equipping of its present plant in order to put out 500,000 cans a week as called for in its contract. The stew will be shipped to Halifax and the work of canning will commence May 1st and continue for 12 months.

Mr. M. S. Bailey of the Chippewa Canning Company stated that there was little doubt but that the proposition would go thru. "From the Canadian Journals and Brokerage firms," he said, "word has come that this order would be placed. Few people not acquainted with the canning industry appreciate the immensity of this order. The Chippewa Cannery packs little over 1,000,000 annually, and of the 80 factories there have a larger output."

The total pack of the country is less than 40 per cent as many cans as this huge order calls for. The filling of this order will undoubtedly necessitate the withdrawing of 14 large factories from the pea packing industry.

This means a big shortage in the output and will undoubtedly result in the raising of the price of peas.

We have received no order for this beef stew and have given the matter no consideration.

It will probably be to our advantage to continue in the pea packing business, however, as the present indication is that there will be an excellent market for the product the coming year.

M. Lemense was declared the choice of the people.

Officials of the state department do not regard the meeting of the parliament of The Netherlands as important. Officials were more concerned over the mobilization orders. A high foreign diplomat said that neither Germany nor Holland would go to war over the Tubantia and Palembang cases.

The Hague, April 5.—Reports that the allies have brought pressure to bear upon Holland to take action derogatory to the commercial interests of Germany have caused much uneasiness.

U. S. TROOPS WIN SECOND BATTLE WITH VILLISTAS

TENTH CAVALRY ROUTS OUTLAWS NEAR AGUA CALIENTES.

THIRTY MEXICANS KILLED

Number of Prisoners Taken by American Forces—General Pershing Tells of Surprise Attack in Report to Funston.

San Antonio, Tex., April 5.—Col. W. C. Brown, commanding a detachment of the Tenth cavalry, swooped down upon a band of Villistas near Bachimba on April 1, killed thirty or forty and took a number of prisoners.

The official report of the second engagement between American troops and Villistas indicates there were no casualties whatever among the Americans.

The fight was a repetition of the brilliant engagement led by Colonel Dodd near Guerrero on Monday of last week when the main body of Villa's forces were routed after sixty had been killed.

Colonel Brown, however, successfully negotiated a surprise attack at noon, instead of at dawn, as was the case with Colonel Dodd.

Just how many prisoners were taken is not made known in the report given out by General Funston, but it is said a considerable quantity of ammunition and equipment, including horses, was taken.

Bachimba is 35 miles northeast of Guerrero.

The Villistas are said to have been on route eastward from Chihuahua City. It is believed they were endeavoring to reach the Mexican Northwest and destroy such parts of the line as was being used to send supplies to the extreme advanced guard.

San Antonio, Tex., April 5.—Thirty Villistas were killed in the second general engagement between the bandit chief's followers and the cavalry of General Pershing's punitive expedition.

A number of prisoners were also taken. News of the battle was received by General Funston from General Pershing.

A squadron of the Tenth cavalry, under the command of Col. W. C. Brown, surprised a Villista band April 1 near Agua Calientes, twenty miles southeast of Bachimba pass, one of the goals Villa himself has been reported making for.

The Villistas were completely routed. Not one American was even wounded, as far as reports received here say. The bandits were pursued through San Antonio, Chihuahua.

Colonel Brown's men came upon the Villistas while they were eating their noonday meal. The Mexicans were dismounted and unorganized. They fled at the first volley fired into them.

Those able to reach their horses threw themselves in the saddle and galloped away, hardly pausing to return the fire of the Americans. Others took to the brush on foot. Forty of the outlaws paid with their lives for their part in the Villa raids and massacres.

Horses and Arms Captured.

A large number of horses, saddles and side arms were captured by Brown's troopers, who are part of the "Fighting Tenth," famous negro cavalry regiment.

Some reports of the engagement state that Brown first encountered the Villistas at Ruggio and pursued them through San Antonio. Different statements are made as to where the fight started, but all reports agree that the Villistas were chased through the town of San Antonio. The engagement occurred somewhere in the vicinity of Agua Calientes, which is 20 miles southeast of the noted Bachimba pass.

General Pershing's report of the fight was forwarded to General Funston by Major Evans by courier from Rubio. Stories of the battle had already reached San Antonio through Mexican sources, but had been rather discredited until Pershing's official confirmation.

General Funston also announced that it was Colonel Brown who commanded the detachment of Dodd's cavalry at the Guerrero fight, in which more than 100 Villistas were killed. Brown had with him ten troops of the Seventh cavalry, all picked men.

General Trevino, Carranzista commander at Torreon, announced the receipt of a letter from Gen. Cantu Reyes, famous outlaw and leader of the Villa forces which have been operating in the vicinity of Torreon, that the Villa forces had been defeated at Grand Rapids.

Soldiers and Civilians Clash in the Streets—News of Trouble Suppressed.

Winnipeg, Man., April 5.—This city is practically under martial law, following riots that occurred on Saturday when a soldier was arrested in a street fight between soldiers and civilians. Rioting continued for seven hours.

Four soldiers and one civilian were seriously hurt and scores of others received minor injuries. Soldiers tried to rescue their companion when he had been arrested, but were beaten back.

News of the riot, which occurred Saturday night, was suppressed by the military authorities.

More than fifty soldiers were arrested and turned over to military authorities.

NEGRO LYNNED BY MOB

Seized in Trial Room and Hanged From the Balcony of the Courthouse.

Isabel, Okla., April 5.—At the conclusion of testimony at the preliminary hearing of Oscar Martin, a negro, charged with attacking a white girl, a mob of 500 stormed the court room, seized the prisoner and hanged him from a back balcony of the court house.

Ineffectual attempts to seize the negro had been made previously.

Brandon, R. F. C., rising 6,000 feet, saw a Zeppelin about 3,000 feet above him. At 9,000 feet he got over it and attacked, dropping several bombs.

"A Baptist chapel, three dwelling houses and two cottages were demolished. A town hall, four dwelling houses, 35 cottages and a tram car shed were partly wrecked. There was no military damage.

"A number of our aeroplanes went up to attack the raiders. Lieutenant Brandon, R. F. C., rising 6,000 feet, saw a Zeppelin about 3,000 feet above him. His own machine was hit many times by machine gun bullets."

The Zeppelin reported by the admiral to have fallen into the sea was L-15. It was hit by gun fire while over the eastern counties with a shell striking the upper part of the ship near the tail.

After being hit it quickly dropped to a lower altitude, well down by the tail and came down into the sea off the coast of Kent.

The captured crew said it was struck by a shell near the stern, settled slowly approaching the coast, and plunged suddenly to the water from a height of about 200 feet.

BIG FIRE IN NEW YORK

Two Five-Story Buildings Destroyed and High Structures Damaged.

New York, April 5.—A section of the business district in the lower part of the city was threatened on Monday by a spectacular fire which burned two seven-story buildings at 16 and 18 Beekman street, occupied by paper dealers. The loss was estimated at $100,000. Several floors of the fourteen-story Morse building were damaged. The American Tract society building of twenty stories, in which the New York Sun offices are located, was damaged by smoke and water.

PURE FOOD LAW IS UPHELD

THIRTY MEXICANS KILLED

Incomplete Returns Show Eschweiler in Lead for State Supreme Court Justice—Results in Many Cities.

Milwaukee—Daniel W. Hoan, socialist city attorney, has been elected mayor of Milwaukee, defeating G. A. Bading, non-partisan candidate for reelection, by a probable majority of 3,000. Unofficial returns from 128 out of 143 precincts gave Hoan 39,187 votes and Bading 29,020. John D. White, democrat, for city treasurer, and Louis M. Kotekis has been re-elected controller over Leo Kryszki, socialist. The majorities of Drew and Kotekis will be between 6,000 and 6,500. Mayor Bading carried nine wards out of twenty-five and Drew and Kotekis each carried fourteen wards.

Contests for aldermen-at-large are very close, but it is probable that five of the six of the non-partisan candidates are winners, the one successful socialist being former Mayor Emil Seidel. It seems certain that the city council will be non-partisan in voting strength. Judge A. G. Heddin has been re-elected circuit court judge, defeating George Mensing, socialist candidate.

The fight was a repetition of the brilliant engagement led by Colonel Dodd over Guerrero on Monday of last week when the main body of Villa's forces were routed after sixty had been killed.

Colonel Brown, however, successfully negotiated a surprise attack at noon, instead of at dawn, as was the case with Colonel Dodd.

Just how many prisoners were taken is not made known in the report given out by General Funston, but it is said a considerable quantity of ammunition and equipment, including horses, was taken.

The Villistas are said to have been en route eastward from Chihuahua City. It is believed they were endeavoring to reach the Mexican Northwest and destroy such parts of the line as was being used to send supplies to the extreme advanced guard.

San Antonio, Tex., April 5.—Col. W. C. Brown, commanding a detachment of the Tenth cavalry, swooped down upon a band of Villistas near Bachipiba on April 1, killed thirty or forty and took a number of prisoners.

The official report of the second engagement between American troops and Villistas indicates there were no casualties whatever among the Americans.

The SEA WOLF

SYNOPSIS

Humphrey Van Weyden, critic and diarist, finds himself aboard the sealing schooner Ghost. Captain Wolf Larsen, bound to Japan, wants him as his second in command. For the good of his soul, the curious cook, Maudie, and the seafarers and hounds that follow him, he stays. Hump when known at the Ghosts jumps Hump when known at the ghosts. A carnival of brutality breaks loose in the ship, and Hump proves himself that he is made man on the high seas and proves by his conduct that a blow that he has learned to inflict on the ghosts is one of the small beats. A young woman and four men survive. A small boat. The deserts are sighted, but Wolf steers away and leaves them to drown. Maudie breaks the ice, the ghosts give up, and Van Weyden finds that they know each other's work. They talk together, and the ghosts are won over to the ghosts. Maudie towels over his head to give him a bath, and his foot bitten off by a shark. The blow that he has learned to inflict on the ghosts is one of the small beats. A young woman and four men survive. A small boat. The deserts are sighted, but Wolf steers away and leaves them to drown. Maudie breaks the ice, the ghosts give up, and Van Weyden finds that they know each other's work. They talk together, and the ghosts are won over to the ghosts.

The blow of smoke which indicated the Macedonia's position had reappeared. "Yes, I've been watching it," was Wolf Larsen's calm reply. He measured the distance away to the fog-bank and for an instant paused to feel the weight of the wind on his cheek. "We'll make it, I think; but you can depend upon it that blessed brother of mine has twiggled our little game and is just a humping for us. Ah, look at that!"

The blow of smoke had suddenly grown larger, and it was very black. "I'll beat you out, though, brother mine," he chuckled. "I'll beat you out and I hope you no worse than that you rack your old engine into scrap."

CHAPTER XXII.

When we have to, a hasty though orderly confusion reigned. The boats came aboard from every side at once. As fast as the prisoners came over, into the rail they were marshaled forward into the forecastle by our hunters, while our sailors hoisted in the boats, pelt-much, dropping them anywhere upon the deck and not stopping to lash them. We were already under way, all sail set and drawing, and the sheets being slackened off for a wind abeam, as the last boat hove clear of the water and so off in the tackles.

There was need for haste. The Macedonia, belching the blackest of smoke from her funnel, was charging down upon us from out of the north-east. Neglecting the boats that remained to her, she had altered her course so as to anticipate ours. She was not running straight for us, but ahead of us. Our courses were converging like the sides of an angle, the vertex of which was at the edge of the fog-bank. It was there, or not at all, that the Macedonia could hope to catch us. The hope for the Ghost lay in that she should pass that point before the Macedonia arrived at it.

"Better get your rifles, you fellows," Wolf Larsen called to our hunters; and the five men lined the lee rail guns in hand, and waited.

The Macedonia was now but a mile away, the black smoke pouring from her funnel at a right angle, so suddenly she raced, pounding through the sea at a seventeen-knot gait—"Sky-hooping through the hells," as Wolf Larsen quoted while gazing at her. We were not making more than nine knots, but the fog-bank was very near.

A puff of smoke broke from the Macedonia's deck, we heard a heavy report, and a round hole took form in the stretched canvas of our mizzenail. They were shooting at us with one of the small cañons which rumor had said they carried on board. Our men, clustering ashore, waved their hats and raised a derisive cheer. Again there was a puff of smoke and a loud report, this time the cannon ball striking not more than twenty feet astern and glancing twice from sea to sea to windward ere it sank.

But there was no rifle-firing for the reason that all their hunters were out in the boats or our prisoners. When the two vessels were half a mile apart, a third shot made another hole in our mizzenail. Then we entered the fog. It was about us, veiling and hiding us in the Macedonia's lights.

"Here, you!" Wolf Larsen cried suddenly to the boat-puller. "Take a turn!"

At the same time he flung the coil of rope. It struck fairly, nearly knocking the man over, but he did not obey. Instead, he looked to his hunter for orders. The hunter, in turn, was in a quandary. His rifle was between his knees, but if he let go the steering-oar in order to shoot, the boat would sweep around and collide with the schooner. Also he saw Wolf Larsen's rifle bearing upon him and knew no bullet would be shot ere he could get his rifle into play.

"Take a turn," he said quietly to the boat-puller.

The boat-puller obeyed, taking a turn around the little forward thwart and paying the line as it jerked taut. The boat sheered out with a rush, and the hunter steered it to a parallel course some twenty feet from the side of the Ghost.

"Now get that sail down and come alongside," Wolf Larsen ordered.

Once aboard, the two prisoners hoisted in the boat and under Wolf Larsen's direction carried the wounded boat-steerer down into the forecastle.

"If our five boats do as well as you and I have done, we'll have a pretty full crew," Wolf Larsen said to me.

"The man you shot—he is, I hope."

"In the shoulder," he answered.

"Nothing serious. Mr. Van Weyden will pull him around as good as ever in three or four weeks."

"But he won't pull those chaps around, from the looks of it," he added, pointing at the Macedonia's third boat, for which I had been steering and which was now nearly abreast of us.

"That's Horner's and Smoko's work," told them we wanted live men, not carcasses, but the joy of shooting to hit is a most compelling thing, when once you've learned how to shoot. Ever heard of Mr. Van Weyden?"

I shook my head and regarded their work. It had indeed been bloody, for they had drawn off and joined out other two boats in the attack on the remaining two of the enemy. The deserted boat was in the trough of the sea, rolling drunkenly across each other, its loose spritsail out at right angles to it and flitting and flapping in the wind. The hunter and boat-puller were both lying awkwardly in the bottom, but the boat-steerer lay across the gunwale, half in and half out, his arms trailing in the water and his head rolling from side to side.

"Don't look, Miss Brewster, please don't look," I had begged of her, and I was glad that she had minded me and I been spared the sight.

"Head right into the bunch, Mr. Van Weyden," was Wolf Larsen's command.

As he drew nearer, the firing ceased,

Queen Sophia of Greece is a great admirer of American country life, and knows many of our finer places well, remarks the Saturday Evening Post. She takes regularly all our publications devoted to country life, and studies in detail our methods of landscape gardening, tree culture and floral display. She thinks we have the most cheerfully and brilliantly beautiful homes in the world—"brilliantly cheerful" was her phrase, and is trying to adapt American ideas to the ornamentation of the royal residences not only in the country, but in Athens as well.

Her majesty does us the honor to employ American architects who have made the plan for the model Greek hospital which she hopes to build as soon as the funds accumulate. There are prac-

DON'T IGNORE FLY MENACE THIS SEASON

Stable Dung Should Be Sprayed and Removed Often, Says Sanitary Specialist.

Many persons do not realize what a serious menace the fly is to the health of this community. It is characteristic of the average man to ignore this kind of danger until it threatens his own family. "Oh, the fly may be the means of carrying a fatal disease to some puny person," you reason, perhaps, but there's no danger of his bringing it to me—I'm in pretty good shape. I eat three square meals a day and sleep all right."

Before I had time to express any desire to know, he had me by the throat with his gorilla grip, and by a faint quiver of the muscles—a hint, as it were—he suggested to me the twist that would surely have broken my neck. The next moment he had released me and we were gazing at the Macedonia's lights.

"What if I should cry out?" Maud asked.

"I like you too well to hurt you," he said softly—nay, there was a tenderness and a caress in his voice that made me wince. "But don't do it, just the same, for I'd promptly break art. Van Weyden's neck."

"Then she has my permission to cry out," I said defiantly.

"I hardly think you'll care to sacrifice the Dean of American Letters the Second," he sneered.

We spoke no more, though we had become too used to one another for the silence to be awkward; and when the red light and the white had disappeared we returned to the cabin to finish the interrupted supper.

If ever Wolf Larsen attained the summit of living, he finished it then. From time to time I forsook my own thoughts to follow him, and I followed him, amazed, mastered for the moment by his remarkable select, under the spell of his passion for what he was preaching the passion of revolt. It was inevitable that Milton's Lucifer should be incarnate, and the keenness with which Wolf Larsen analyzed and depicted the character was a revelation of his stiffer genius. It reminded me of Taine, yet I knew the man had never heard of that brilliant though dangerous thinker.

Stevenson as a German Spy.

It is interesting, says the London Chronicle, to recall that Stevenson has recorded his imprisonment in France as a German spy, so foreign looking was he in appearance. Andrew Lang found his appearance at twenty-eight was anything but that of a Scotswoman, and the keenness with which he analyzed and depicted the character was a revelation of his stiffer genius. It reminded me of Taine, yet I knew the man had never heard of that brilliant though dangerous thinker.

The sudden transition was startling. The moment before we had been learning through the sunshine, the clear sky above us, the sea breaking and rolling wide to the horizon, and a ship, vomiting smoke and fire and iron missiles, rushing madly upon us. And at once, in an instant's leap, the sun was blotted out, there was no sky, even our mastheads were lost to view, and our horizon was such as tear-blinded eyes may see.

It was weird, strangely weird. I looked at Maud Brewster and knew that she was similarly affected. Then I looked at Wolf Larsen, but there was nothing subjective about his state of consciousness. His whole concern was with the immediate objective present. He still held the wheel, and I felt that he was timing time, reckoning the passage of the minutes with each forward lunge and seaward roll of the ghost.

"Go forward and hard-a-ways without any noise," he said to me in a low voice. "Draw on the tarpaulins first. Set men at all the sheets. Let there be no rattling of blocks, no sound of voices. No noise, understand, no noise."

When all was ready, the word "hard-a-ways" was passed forward to me from man to man; and the ghost heeded about the port tack with practically no noise at all. And what little there was—the slapping of a few points and the creaking of a sheave in a block or two—was ghostly under the hollow echoing pall in which we were swathed.

He was brilliant, but so was Maud, and for some time I lost the thread of the conversation through studying her face as she talked. It was a face that rarely displayed color, but tonight it

CATHOLIC COUPLES MUST WRITE BETROTHALS

A Catholic publication, "Our Young People", announces in its March number following prenuptial rules in that church:
"Every matrimonial engagement must be in writing, although there is no necessity nor obligation to enter into a formal engagement before marriage. Parties wishing to become engaged must sign the prenuptial contract and have the bishop or their pastor witness it. In the absence of the bishop or priest, two witnesses must sign the engagement. If one or both of those to be engaged cannot write, this should be noted and and three lay witnesses must sign the engagement in the absence of the bishop or the parish priest.

These engagements should be encouraged. If made some months before marriage they will help to stop hasty alliances which are the cause of so many divorces outside the church and of so many unhappy marriages among Catholics.

Protestants and all who have never been baptised in the Catholic church are not subjects of this law, hence their private contracts bind, for the simple reason that the church has not made these conditions under which they must enter into an engagement."

DUCE FLIGHT STARTED.
HUNTERS OBSERVE LAW.

TAKE NOTICE
Washouts on State Highways

The flight of ducks to the north has begun and it would be well for the hunters to observe the law prohibiting spring shooting of them. The Federal Migratory Bird Law also prohibits the spring shooting of ducks, and all violations of the Wisconsin law are reported to the Federal authorities and the violators apprehended will be prosecuted by the Federal authorities after paying the fine imposed by our state courts.

Hunters should also bear in mind that the statute of limitations in these cases gives two years after the violations are committed to start action, and violators can be brought into court at any time should evidence be found on which to base the prosecution.

The law also provides that any person making complaints and furnishing evidence which leads to the conviction of a violator, is entitled to one-third of the fine imposed. It is at all unusual for cases to be brought into court long after the violations are committed and it is indeed unsafe for any hunter to feel secure from prosecution even tho he escape immediate detection.

The Conservation commission has made several prosecutions during the past six months where the offense was committed several months ago and in every case the violators were found guilty and fined. We have several cases under investigation at the present time and no doubt prosecutions will follow.

It is therefore advisable that all hunters observe the law and avoid the danger of prosecution.

time to teach the nursing calf the art of taking its meals by nursing a finger. If you were born or raised on the farm you have not forgotten your experiences in trying to take the place of a mother cow and teach an idiot calf to take its rations by the finger process. Many a good man has broken one or more of the ten commandments on occasions of this kind and as long as there are calves to be orphanized the practice will be kept up. There is nothing we can think of that is less accountable for its foolhardy acts than a hungry calf during its transition from a sucker to a hand made drinker. We credit Job with a good deal of patience when he had boils enough to start a boiler factory, but I'll tell you there is nothing that will make a person forget his Sunday school lessons quicker than acting wet nurse to a calf, whose mother has been kidnapped for milk chewing purposes.

Hand milking is a hard job in cold weather, in dry time, after a hard day's work, or any other time—especially hard when you are short-handed.

The EMPIRE Milker takes care of a job nobody likes. Pays you a hand-some profit. Insures your cows always being milked regularly, quickly and uniformly. It's goodbye to hand milking and everybody glad of it.

Mechanical Milker

One man, using only one double unit, can milk 20 to 30 cows per hour, besides doing the stripping and carrying the milk. Single Units, each of which will milk 10 to 15 cows per hour, can be had if preferred. One man can care for two or three single units.

Holifers and old cows both like the EMPIRE Milker and take to it quickly. The frequent increase in milk flow proves that.

The illustration shows you the Double Unit outfit in actual operation, except for the small pump and tank which supply the vacuum. Any suitable power will drive the pump.

Grip Still Hanging On?

HAS LONG PROGRAM

CONGRESS MAY BE IN SESSION THROUGH SUMMER, SAYS SPEAKER CLARK.

WEIGHTY MEASURES PENDING

Army and Navy Bills May Take Long Time—Biological Survey an Important Bureau—Pershing's Rapid Work in Mexico.

By GEORGE CLINTON.

Washington—Propriets in congress are still busy with long-distance forecasts concerning the day of adjournment. Some of the proprieys will be without honor in Washington and in the country. The more hopeful ones declare that it will all be by independence day, while the others, less hopeful, notably Speaker Champ Clark, say that senate and house will be in session until summer has been dismissed.

There is a long legislative program full of items as yet unascended. The preparedness bill framed by the committee on military affairs has passed the house, but the senate is still debating the Chamberlain measure on its own account. The senate bill provides for a much greater degree of army preparedness than does the one favored by the representatives.

The biologicals of the government service own a rocky island in the Potomac river at some distance from the city of Washington. The island was a neglected spot for years, being unsuited for residence purposes because of its situation. It is a wild place, and it is the haunt of many rare species of birds, and it also is the abiding place of some of the mammals which are not often found in other places near Washington in these days of encroaching civilization.

The island that the biologicals go to whenever a vacation day comes rises about seventy feet out of the water to a rocky point upon the top of which stands a snug cabin with a huge fire place at one end. This is the early spring season in Washington, and the birds are beginning to come back, but all winter long on this island of the biologicals the winter birds have been feeding constantly and made happy thereby even when the snow was drifting and the cold was closing in.

There are bird breakfast tables, dinner tables and supper tables spread all about the biologicals cabin.

There are a good many quail on the mainland near the scientists' island.

The quail are fed in the cold weather when the snow is deep and their natural food, the weed seeds, is covered.

Foxes occasionally visit the island, and there is a thriving family of woodpeckers, or groundhogs as some people call them, leading a happy existence just below the cabin.

It is the wish of the scientists to have growing on the island every species of wild flower which this section of the country has to offer.

One by one the species have been gathered and transplanted. In the spring the place is a garden.

Speedy Cavalry Chasing Villa.

The speed of an army is the speed of the least speedy of the organizations which make it up. General Pershing when first pushing into Mexico made about thirty-five miles a day through sand and rocks and thickets and mountain defiles. Army officers in Washington have been watching the outcome of the bandit hunt in Mexico and they are also watching the records of travel made by the troops.

There are records in the war department of scores of long, hard rides made by American troopers, but there are no records since the Civil war days of "speed expeditions" in which so many men were engaged as is the case in the Pershing advance. Taking into consideration the size of the Pershing outfit, the material that it necessarily must carry with it and the awful condition of the country through which it must travel, it perhaps already has made a new mark for rapidity of advance.

The movement of Pershing, however, with his thousands of troopers is slow as compared to the records made by small detachments of regulars in the past when they were on vital hurry-up errands. Col. Theodore A. Dodge, United States army, now deceased, collected the official records of long-distance cavalry rides and made them public, so that it was possible to compare them with the performance of soldier horsemen of other nations.

Almost Beyond Belief.

Some of the performances of American cavalrymen are almost past belief, but they are attested by witnesses and in most cases the attestation is known to be valid because the hour of starting and the hour of arriving were taken down and put into the official reports.

In the year 1879 when the Utes succeeded in getting some United States troops into what afterward was known as "Thornburg's rat hole," several mounted troopers succeeded in slipping through the circling line of savages. All of them reached the column of General Merritt, 170 miles distant in less than twenty-four hours. The exact time was not taken for as Col. Dodge puts it, "rescue was of more importance than records."

Some Fast Riding.

The revenue-raising bills are those which are attracting perhaps the sharpest attention from the country, if one eliminates from consideration the great preparedness measures. It is virtually certain that a good many more millions of dollars must be raised in the next year than it was necessary to raise in the past year. The army and navy are to be increased, and other necessary expenses are to be added to the debt page of the government's ledger.

It seems likely that provision will be made to raise some additional millions by means of an increase in the income tax. It does not seem at all likely that any change will be made in the paragraphs which exempt $4,000 incomes of married persons and $3,000 incomes of unmarried persons. The additional taxes in all probability will be laid on incomes of a greater amount. Money may also be raised by a form of inheritance tax, and it is probable that tax may be levied on the profits of concerns engaged in making munitions of war.

Valueable Work for Farmers.

Every American citizen who receives government publications through the mail and who reads them, knows something about the biological survey of the department of agriculture. It is Uncle Sam's biologists who tell the agriculturists what birds and animals are injurious to the crops and which of them are beneficial. They do their valuable work in connection with their constant field study of the habits of American mammal and bird life.

All of the biologists, of course, are scientists and ordinarily people look on scientists as belonging to rather an aloof species of mankind. So far as the workers in the biological survey are concerned this estimate of the devotees of science is way beside the mark. Uncle Sam's scientists are genuine souls and it does not follow at all that because they love the wild places and their denizens they do not love their fellow men.

The chief of the bureau of biological survey is Henry W. Henshaw, who has written volumes about birds and beasts, who has camped when in pursuit of his studies in every section of the United States and in many other parts of the world. Mr. Henshaw has been connected with the bureau for a good many years. He succeeded Dr. C. Hart Merriam as chief of the bureau when the latter left Uncle Sam's service to become the chief of the Harriman Biological Foundation a few years ago.

Biologists of Fame.

Others of the biologists of national fame are Dr. A. K. Fisher, who is the great authority on the birds of prey, E. M. Nelson, who knows to a hair every beast of the field and to a feather every bird of the air, and Dr. T. S. Palmer, ornithologist and mammalogist, whose particular work just at present, and one in which his heart is engaged, is the subject of the present nation of the game, both birds and mammals, of the United States.

Easily Cleaned as a China Plate

To clean this range just wipe off the white porcelain parts. The polished top requires no blacking, so practically no effort is required to keep the Joy Eclipse clean and bright. This saves you many minutes of disagreeable labor every day.

ECLIPSE CAST RANGE

The Eclipse way forces the heat to pass under all six lids before escaping. When cooking or ironing in the summer the entire top of the range can be kept hot without heating the oven. This is not possible in other ranges.

On ordinary ranges the flames skip half the top, pass almost directly out the fire and only three lids are hot enough for cooking. You really have only half a range.

We have a limited supply of attractive booklets giving practical recipes, and VALUABLE INFORMATION on the proper care and operation of your range. Call and secure a copy before they are all gone. They are free.

Begin at The Bottom

That's good advice. First, because it is the sure way; second, because for the most of us it is the ONLY way. A step at a time, one dollar piled up beside another, careful, conservative, saving—these things will bring you gradually but surely up the ladder of success. Men fail because they got in too big a hurry, too anxious to grab at the golden apples hanging just out of reach. Stick to your ladder, stick to your job. Stick to your saving habit. The fellow who goes up like a sky rocket usually comes down like a thousand of brick.

6700 CUBIC YARDS OF EARTH TO BE CONTRACTED.

The County State Road and Bridge Committee of Wood County will receive bids for the morning of the following estimated amounts of earth out of the soil, commencing near the Lake Butte des Morts, the first half of August. Bidding and crew consisted of 150,000 pounds of earth. This was, at that time, the biggest catch ever known in these waters, but later in the day another haul was made of 200,000 pounds of earth, which beats all previous records. The fish are being shipped alive and as fast as possible in huge water tanks, by fast trains, to New York city, where these fish find ready sale at high prices.

6000 cubic yards of earth to be moved into a fill at the East end of the Nekopos bridge; 125 cubic yards of sandstone to be moved from the road bed of the approach to the bridge in the Town of Saratoga.

A certified check for $100.00 must accompany all sealed bids and be in the hands of the County Highway Commissioner before twelve o'clock noon, on the 25th day of April, 1916. The undersigned reserves the right to reject any or all bids.
